A Feeling of Confidence Restored at Pine Ridge.

The Official Report

WASHINGTON December 30 The commissioner of Indian affairs this morning received the following dispatch from Agent D F Royer dated Pine Ridge agency December 29

On Wounded Knee creek this morning while the soldiers were disarming Big Foot and his band after their surrender a fight took place which resulted in the killing of about 300 Indians and several of the soldiers including Captain Wallace with a number wounded Two Strike and his party who were camped on White Clay creek just below Red Cloud s house opened fire on this agency from the hill tops opposite the board school wounding two soldiers The police returned the fire killing two of Two Strike s Indians and wounding two others Two Strike and his band have retreated in a northwesterly course from the agency and it is supposed he is trying to make his way back to the Bad lands Thus far the Pine Ridge Indians have taken no active part in the fight, but Big Foot Slow Bear Kicking Bear and the Two Strike band have been and are active in the disturbance

Panic at Pine Ridge.

CHICAGO December 30 —A special dispatch from Pine Ridge agency says the news of the battle at Wounded Knee excited the Indians at that agency to an alarming manner The entire camp was soon in commotion and the restless young bucks took to the hills apparently eager for the fray Even the most loyal of the Indians were affected and the couriers themselves seemed eager for blood It was not long before desultory firing was heard near the agency Little Wound s men have fled back to the range north of here toward Two Strike's, and both gangs are preparing to attack the agency

The firing last night was just west of the school house and between the police and Two Strike s gang Bullets whistled past the buildings in a startling way

The troops here are the infantry under General Wheaton with one Gatling gun four heavy guns and one Hotchkiss rifle These will probably be heavy skirmishing until morning Every one hopes that the troops will arrive by that time

There are 5 000 Indians encamped about the agency buildings. Their tepees are pitched in a semi-circle way to the north west and east, and along a deep ravine through which Clay-Creek flows If all these Indians revolt it would not take them long to wipe out the handful of infantry from Omaha, and massacre the entire camp Every building at the agency is built of wood including the traders stores and government storehouses and the Indians could complete their work in short order by applying the torch

The Indian school houses which are just west of the agency buildings and within rifle shot of General Brooke s headquarters, are immense structures there are nearly 200 Indian boys and girls in the schools besides whites and half breeds

The people who can leave the agency are doing so as rapidly as possible

Another Battle

MINNEAPOLIS December 30 —A special to the Journal from Rushville says A scattering fire at long range was kept up last night between Two Strike s band from the heights northwest of the agency and the troops. This commenced upon the arrival of the Ninth cavalry troops from Colonel Henry s command in the Bad lands The casualties thus far reported are one soldier killed and one wounded

At 2 a m an attempt was made by Two Strike's band to capture the Seventh cavalry supply train returning from the scene of the battle yesterday at Wounded Knee Upon hearing the shots the troops made a dash routed the reds and killed thirty three of them In response to the signal lights sent up last night hundreds of settlers took refuge here in the churches and court room A better feeling now prevails at Pine Ridge

Return of the Survivors

OMAHA Neb December 30 —Colonel Forsythe reached Pine Ridge agency this morning with the Seventh cavalry and the surviving prisoners He reports 25 of his men killed and 34 wounded in the fight on the Porcupine yesterday General Brooke has since the fight revoked his order for a train to carry prisoners south under guard There is only a remnant left.

Big Foot s Fate

WASHINGTON December 30 Gen Schofield this afternoon received a message from Gen Miles dated Hermosa S D December 30 as follows Gen Brooke wires as follows Col Forsythe says sixty two dead Indian men were counted on the plain where the attempt was made to disarm Big Foot s band, when the fight began On other parts of the ground there were eighteen more These don t include those killed in ravines where dead warriors were seen but not counted Six were brought in badly wounded Six others who were with a party of 23 men and women which escaped had to be abandoned when the troops were attacked by about 150 Indians near the agency This accounts for 92 men killed and leaves but few alive and unhurt

The women and children broke for the hills when the fight commenced and comparatively few of them were hurt and few brought in Thirty nine are here of which number 21 are wounded Had it not been for the attack by the Brules an accurate account could have been made but the ravines were not searched afterwards I think this shows very little apprehension from Big Foot s band in the future A party of forty is reported as held by scouts at the head of Mexican creek The cavalry from Rosebud will bring them in if it is true

[Signed] JOHN R BROOKE

The Indians under Big Foot were among the most desperate. They included 88 of the remainder of Sitting Bull s following that joined Big Foot in Dakota Territory and thirty that left him away from Hunkpatila and joined Two Strike a few days before the battle Before leaving their agency to be Friendly Indians they cut up their blankets broke their guns and bows and with for the Bad lands to go to war

The troops were placed between them and the Bad lands and they never succeeded in joining the hostiles Of these movements we will have more to say in their severe losses at the hands of the Seventh cavalry may be a wholesome lesson to the other Sioux

[Signed] MILES

General Schofield says it is fortunate that the fight was as it was considering the circumstances but he did not see how it could have been avoided He sent a telegram to General Miles saying in regards to the news received from him so suddenly and expressing the opinion that he (Miles) would be master of the situation very soon He also expressed his thanks to the officers and men of the Seventh cavalry for the gallant conduct displayed by them

The following telegram was received by the surgeon general this afternoon dated Pine Ridge Agency S D

I report to you a fight with an engagement with Indians yesterday fifteen miles from here The following are the casualties Capt Wallace 20th of the Seventh cavalry and one Indian scout killed Lieut Garlington Seventh cavalry Lieut Hawthorne Second artillery and 38 men wounded This includes two men of the Second infantry Many wounds are severe Hospital Steward Pollock was killed Have also about thirty wounded Indians men women and children

The Battle Described

OMAHA December 30 —The Bee correspondent at the camp on Wounded Knee creek telegraphs the latest of yesterday's battle After describing the surrounding of the Indians and the order to search the tepees for arms he says

This work had hardly been entered upon when the 420 desperate Indians turned upon the soldiers who were gathered closely about the tepees and immediately a storm of firing was poured upon the military It was thought the order to search had been a signal The latter not anticipating any such action had been gathered in very closely and the first firing was terribly disastrous to them

The reply was immediate however and in an instant it seemed that the draw in which the Indian camp was set was a sunken Vesuvius The soldiers, maddened at the sight of their fallen comrades hardly awaited the command and in a moment the whole front was a sheet of fire, above which the smoke rolled, obscuring the central scene from view

Through this horrible scene single Indians could be seen at times flying before the fire, but after the first discharge from the carbines of the troops there were few of them left They fell on all sides like grain in the course of a scythe The Indians and soldiers lay together and wounded fought on the ground Off through the draw toward the bluffs the warriors fled, turning occasionally to fire, but evidently not caring more for escape than battle

The wounded Indians seemed possessed of the courage of devils From the ground where they had fallen they continued to fire until their ammunition was gone or until killed by the soldiers Both sides forgot everything except the loading and discharging of their guns

It was in the early part of the affray that a hand-to hand fight was seen The carbines were clubbed, sabres gleamed and war clubs circled in the air and came down like thunderbolts This was only for a short time The Indians could not stand the storm from the soldiers. It was only a stroke of the life before death

It was now that the artillery was called into requisition, as before the guns could not be trained without danger of death to the soldiers Now with the Indians flying, it was easier to reach them The Gatling and Hotchkiss guns were trained and then began a heavy firing which lasted half an hour, with frequent heavy volleys of musketry and cannon

It was a war of extermination now with the troops It was difficult to restrain them Tactics was almost abandoned About the only tactics was to kill For several minutes the engagement went on until not a live Indian was in sight

Two Strikes Defeat

OMAHA, December 30 —The Bee special from Rushville, Neb. says 'Advices from the seat of war give the news of another encounter between the troops and Indians at a point within four miles of the agency The Seventh and Ninth cavalry were just coming in from yesterday a battlefield followed by their provision train

On reaching the point named a large band of Indians headed by Chief Two Strikes dashed suddenly upon the train captured it and were making off towards the Bad lands when the cavalry wheeled and gave pursuit In the battle which followed over thirty Indians were wounded No soldiers were killed

According to the latest reports Two Strikes Indians had yesterday been considered peaceable and subdued but their sudden change of mind causes the greatest fears here that perhaps none of the so called friendlies can be relied on However, word from General Brooke to the settlers to day is somewhat reassuring it being to the effect that a great body of the savages have remained loyal all the while and that nearly all the rebels are dead He further says the settlers here are not in danger

News is also at hand that Colonel Henry is now approaching the agency with 100 Indians captured in the Bad Lands. This is expected to include all the remnant of the rebels on the reservation and hopes are entertained for a speedy settlement It has cost the lives of about 250 Indians and about 25 or 30 soldiers killed and wounded to effect this result If indeed it may be said that peace is yet established

A Change in Indian Policy

NEW YORK December 30 —A Herald dispatch from Washington says ever since the beginning of the present Indian troubles President Harrison has been thinking seriously of urging legislation to secure the transfer of the Indians from the interior department to the control of the war department The matter was discussed at some length during General Miles last visit east and all the war department officials united with him in the opinion that the red men should be placed under military control When all the warriors have been captured there will be a radical departure in the method of managing the various tribes

London s Great Fire

LONDON December 30 A terrible conflagration now rages in this city The scene of the fire is Queen Victoria and Thames streets near Blackfriars bridge Nature is working as we are blazing and London seems to be destined to suffer one of the blackest and most destructive disasters of its history

LATER—Fifteen fire engines were soon upon the scene and the firemen did their utmost but with little success to check the course of the flames A high wind was blowing and it materially aided the fury of the flames while hindering the firemen in their efforts to save property Terrible sheets of flames and clouds of hot smoke were frequently whirled dangerously near the struggling firemen who met with little success in their battle with the fiery element The large wholesale fur manufactory of Revellon Freers extending from No 127 to 141 Queen Victoria street was said to be doomed shortly after the fire gained strong headway Following this news was the information that a large paper warehouse a number of fancy goods stores and the Gulcher Electric Light and Power company s buildings were also a prey to the flames

The flames spread as rapidly on all sides as if there were no firemen or fire engines present Immense crowds of people gathered on the bridges over the tramway in the streets running down the river where a good view of the conflagration could be had Many people expressed the hope that this disaster would at last bring about reform in the London fire brigade It has long needed remodelling upon the plan of the New York fire department It seems strange to many people in view of the terrible fires of a week or so ago when nearly a dozen buildings were destroyed on Praed street that old fashioned manual fire engines should still be in use in the London fire department while the steamers or steam fire engines in use seem to be utterly behind the times

As the fire progressed it spread to the headquarters of the Salvation army illuminating that red painted blood and fire building in a most ominous manner The Salvationists are working like beavers in their efforts to place the records and other property of the army in a place of safety before it is too late

Upon the authority of the London fire brigade chief upon the scene of the disaster it was announced that the fire originated in the building occupied by C Davidson & Sons paper and paper felt manufacturers and paper bag makers at 119 Queen Victoria street This building extended back into Upper Thames street It was a large structure and was completely gutted as was also that of A Dolph Frankau & Co manufacturers of pipes and importers of tobacco at No 121 Queen Victoria street

Old St Paul s Church Paul s Wharf Queen No 225 and No 226 Upper Thames street a famous Welsh church also caught fire its blazing steeple forming one of the most striking features of the grandly terrible scene The firemen at one time managed to gain control of the flames at this point and the conflagration so far as St Bennet s was concerned was for a time arrested

At this hour (4 p m) the fire is rapidly spreading in all directions All the buildings from the corner of Bennet s Hill to No 135 Queen Victoria street are either blazing furiously or are gutted and smouldering with scorched blackened shells around them And all this ruin has been done and much more is being done to all appearances uncheck ed in spite of the presence of twenty steam fire engines two fire escapes and a large number of old manual fire engines upon the scene The latter however might just as well be in the British museum

LONDON December 30 At 5 p m the flames had won another victory over the firemen and St Bennet s church was completely destroyed On the other hand the firemen at that hour had managed to save the Salvation army headquarters from destruction and it was announced that the members of the London fire brigade were once more happy and in full control of the situation and the ruins In other words the fire had about burned itself out and the fire department with 29 engines on the spot was pouring water on mountains of smoldering debris

LONDON December 30 —It is now 6 p m and a careful examination of the scene of the battle fought between the London fire brigade and the fire fiend shows that parts of St Bennet s church were not destroyed so the old worshiping place has not suffered so severely as first stated

In justice to the London firemen it may be said that they had a hard tussle with the weather as well as the flames As previously noted a high wind materially assisted the fire in its work of destruction, and the weather was so cold that the water froze almost in the air formed ice all over the fire apparatus and over the firemen The cold weather also hindered the engines from working smoothly and when the firemen fastened two ladders together in order to climb to a point of vantage, their fingers and hands were so numbed with cold that they were unable to grasp the rounds of the extended ladders

There was no loss of life and but few accidents among the firemen One man was taken to Charing Cross hospital in a partially suffocated condition but he is said to be in no danger of losing his life

The cause of the fire is unknown and the amount of damage is now estimated to be 400,000 pounds or $2,000,000 Revellon Freers recently received one hundred thousand pounds worth of seal skins which have been almost entirely consumed by the flames

LONDON December 30 —The entire value of Revillon Freers stock of furs was 250 000 pounds One half of this amount was nearly entirely destroyed and the other half was damaged The total loss is placed at from two to ten million dollars

The Irish Conference

BOULOGNE December 30 —8 p m Mr Parnell and his party by a number of the conferees has just landed here from the Elkest on board Messrs O Brien and Dillon have arrived from Amiens and the conference between the first leaders will take place this afternoon The mutineers of the Irish Parliamentary party

Mr Parnell looks well in health will [illegible] in spite of the cares which have left their marks on his face but his eyes were still bandaged the [illegible] by the strain of the past few days

Shortly after arrival Mr Parnell went to the hotel where the conference will take place Mr Wm O Brien and Mrs Parnell met Mr O Brien then registered O Brien then went to a private room where he and Mr Parnell were joined by the Irish leaders the two leaders remained in conference for about half an hour A gentleman of that time Mr Parnell and Mr O Brien had lunched together seemed to be on very good terms Naturally there is considerable speculation as to what took place at the conference but nothing is known It is thought however that if the conference as a result of this afternoon s statement of some description will be given to the press representatives of which are numerous at the Hotel du Louvre

Dillon s Statement

NEW YORK December 30 —President Dillon of the Union Pacific makes the following statement in which Mr Gould concurs The status of the Union Pacific and the St Paul and Rock Island roads at Omaha may be summarized as follows In 1885 a traffic contract was made between the Union Pacific and the St Paul and the Rock Island companies known as the tripartite by which business was to be interchanged between the three companies on a favorable term at Council Bluffs This contract was for twenty five years and is still in force and being acted on On May 1, 1890 what purports to be a lease of the Union Pacific bridge the terminals at Omaha and the use of its main tracks to the westward limits of the city of Omaha was made by two separate leases —one half to the St Paul and the other half to the Rock Island These leases are for 999 years for a consideration of about one half of what the company received last year from its bridge toll on their business

The Rock Island has advertised to open a competing line to the Union Pacific for its whole length from Omaha to Ogden thus paralleling the Union Pacific for its entire length To illustrate this suppose a road built from Buffalo parallel to the New York Central from Buffalo to Spuyten Duyvel and then using the New York Central terminals in New York city for $47 500 a year for its competing lines

The existence of these leases was unknown to the new members of the board As soon as they learned that they existed they were submitted to Judge Dillon, who advised the directors that under the charter of the Union Pacific these leases were ultra vires and in violation of the partnership and relations between the government and company The government directors requested the president of the company to suspend any action under these leases until such time as they could be legally advised as to their validity It will be the earnest effort of the directors of the Union Pacific to cultivate the most friendly relations between the St. Paul and Rock Island companies for mutual interchange of business at Omaha and Council Bluffs

An Irish Hope

DUBLIN December 30 —The Freeman s Journal in its issue of this date referring to the birthday celebration yesterday of the Hon W E Gladstone says that it cordially joins with his English well wishers in hoping to see Great Britain an Ireland reconciled and peaceful

Pope and People

DUBLIN December 30 —Timothy Harrington at a meeting of the National League said that although the American press did its utmost to strike down Mr Parnell an American audience would not listen to a man who raised his voice against Mr Parnell Mr Harrington added that he was confident Sir John Pope Hennessy would be unseated and that the minority would accept any compromise arrangement which might be agreed upon between Parnell and O Brien

An Important Capture.

CHICAGO December 30 Charles Koch was arrested late last night on a charge of counterfeiting He was turned over to the secret service officials Koch s house was searched and a complete set of stamps and dies were found They were of superior manufacture and capable of turning out an excellent class of work The stamps and dies were gauged for the manufacture of quarters and dimes During the last few weeks the north side has been flooded with counterfeit dimes and quarters and hundreds of complaints reached the officials

To Deceive the Press

PARIS December 30 —La Presse of this city announces that the Parnell O Brien conference will take place at Paris and not at Boulogne sur Mer as generally supposed La Presse adds that the report circulated to the effect that the conference was to take place at Boulogne was intentionally spread about in order to throw off the scent the army of newspaper correspondents and reporters who are watching every movement of the Irish leaders

A Mexican Concession

WASHINGTON December 30 —The bureau of American republics has information that the president of Mexico has approved the bill recently passed by the Mexican congress admitting corn from the United States free of duty This is a very large concession as the duty heretofore has been one cent per kilogram or about one and one half cents per pound

Not in a Fix Now

JACKSON Mich December 30 —Ex Mayor Nevin of Adrian Mich who bankrupted that city seven years ago by stealing nearly $300 000 is to be pardoned to-day from the state prison where he is doing ten years time on his plea of guilty Upon regaining his freedom he will enter the law office of John J Atkinson of Detroit and practice law

ANNOUNCEMENT

There is no more useful reference book than an atlas of the world. The most useful one now published for an American is the Rand, McNally Standard Atlas of the World. The information it contains regarding this country is more accurate and fuller than that published in the more expensive atlases costing from ten to twenty-five dollars. The publisher's price for this atlas is four dollars and fifty cents. We have made special arrangements to sell these with subscriptions to the GAZETTE, or to give as a premium for subscriptions. We make the following propositions:

The Weekly GAZETTE for one year and the Standard Atlas of the World, $8 50.

To any one sending us four weekly subscriptions at $1.50 each, we will give the atlas as a premium.

We also club this with the daily GAZETTE on the following terms:

Daily one month and atlas	$3 00
Daily three months and atlas	4 50
Daily six months and atlas	7 00
Daily one year and atlas	11 50

Those renewing their subscriptions and paying in advance will stand on the same basis as those giving new subscriptions.

This atlas may be seen at the office. It is a large size folio book, 11x14 inches. It contains the most complete maps obtainable of all the countries of the world, with population by cities and valuable statistics. For the United States, the maps are particularly full and complete. In many cases, even maps of cities are given. This atlas is the result of twenty-five years of work by Rand, McNally & Company, of Chicago, whom De Vinne has predicted will be the great publishing house of America. No more useful Christmas present can be given than this atlas.

Yesterday was Colorado day in the senate.

A considerable part of the loss in yesterday's fire was in sealskins which belonged in Alaska rather than in London.

It is rather early to announce changes in the base ball rules, but we notice that while many of the hostiles have come in to give themselves up, Two Strikes is out.

Senator Wolcott condemns the force bill, Senator Teller objects to cloture and Uncle Jerry Rusk finds fault with the McKinley bill. But these are all good republicans.

With the arrival of Colonel Forsythe at Pine Ridge with the Seventh cavalry, the immediate danger to the agency is over. Doubtless the presence of the soldiers had much to do with the better feeling in London.

It is too soon to criticize the London fishmen severely. American cities are, as a rule, less solidly built—than European ones, and the necessities for fire protection are much greater. With the storm and the circumstances of the fire it might well have become uncontrollable even in America. The presence of the old hand pumping machines naturally suggests the query, what would have been the result if there were no other means of fighting the fire?

For his bold stand against the force bill, Senator Wolcott will gain credit with those republicans who value the principles of our government above the tricks of temporary party expediency. He makes a good point in suggesting that before criticizing the Southerners too much, Colorado people should consider what they would do if the majority of voters here were Chinese. Moral and political worth is independent of the color of a man's skin. A good black man is better than a bad white man. But the majority of the negroes of the south are not politically intelligent nor responsible. This is not theory. The experiment was tried, disastrously, in reconstruction days.

The New Year's edition of the GAZETTE will appear to-morrow morning. No trouble has been spared to make this a complete and satisfactory paper. It will be of sixteen pages, containing a full and accurate description of this city and the county, and industries of the county. Special attention, as usual, will be paid to the progress of the past twelve months and the various statistics in this line will be found to be interesting and reliable. The illustrations are numerous and include the most important of the buildings erected during the year, as well as some whose construction was determined but not yet begun. The number of orders already received warrants the conclusion that the edition will be exhausted within a few days, subscribing early will do well to secure a copy.

THE LONDON FIRE.

The big fire in London occurred in that part of the city lying near the river two miles east of Blackfriars bridge. Its run streets. Thence and Q[illegible] sharp angle ning westward up[illegible] a large warehouse. The fire origin[illegible] from one street to extending [illegible] At latest accounts the fire the under control after having burned blocks of buildings and destroyed property whose value is variously estimated from one and a half to ten million dollars. The best [illegible] able buildings destroyed are the Welsh church of St Benet, and the church of old St Paul's. The latter name will recall to mind the [illegible] cathedral which was built by Sir Christopher Wren, the famous architect who rebuilt London after the great fire of 1666 had destroyed five sixths of the city. That conflagration burned past the scene of yesterday's fire, beginning near the Tower of London, at a place now commemorated by the monument and extending almost to the west end of Fleet street, a distance of more than a mile. The name of the church burned yesterday would seem to suggest that it may have been one of the buildings spared by the fire of two centuries ago. In this connection it may be of interest to note that the Chicago fire of 1871 burned over 2,100 acres of ground and destroyed $200,000,000 worth of property. The fire of yesterday was very far from being the most destructive of modern times.

Open Letter to Young Men

Y M C A ROOMS
COLORADO SPRINGS
16 SOUTH TEJON ST

To the Young Men of Colorado Springs and Vicinity:

I doubt not that you in common with the civilized world have been this week celebrating, in form at least, the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ to this earth.

You know that He is God's son, that He claims now as in the past to have authority and power to save to the uttermost from the goading of fierce temptations, the remorse of past and now to you remediless sins in the desolateness of a life which has no sure outlook of hope beyond the grave.

Many young men of this city whom I know, He has saved from all this in the year that is past.

You know that there is not one feather's weight of true honest happiness which he ever takes from a human life; that he fed the hungry just because they were hungry, yet with the hope that by so doing he might win them to him as the one mighty to save them from all their deepest needs.

You remember that he rejoiced at the marriage feast—just because he is good—at every innocent goodness of man.

Among his last words on earth are those that his people were hereafter to be his representatives to the world. "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world."

The one great aim of the Young Men's Christian Association, to which everything else is only auxiliary, is just to do and be this. To stand in Christ's place as His representative to young men, to do this in His spirit, by His power to His glory.

Its one aim is to be simply an organized body of men, themselves given to Lord Jesus for Him to use them to do for every young man everything in their power which the Lord Jesus Himself would do if He were here again in His human body—and all this just for the purpose that He would do it, that is to induce them to come to Him for their greatest needs and deepest wants.

It is to this end that the reading room is opened, to every young man, that classes in various branches of study are organized, that every amusement and benefit that it could command and that He would approve are freely offered to young men. It is to Him and for His work that the money used in the association is solicited.

So it is truly in His name that we ask you to come to the rooms, whether in the present, or those we hope to occupy, to take all that you will of that which He has provided for you.

GEO. W. STAITS,
General Secretary.

Making Diamonds Grow

New York Sun.

"Look at this stone," said a young journeyman jeweler in a street car the other day, removing a tissue paper wrapping from a piece of white wax in the center of which a beautiful diamond blazed. "That is worth at the least $180."

"How is it that you can afford to buy such a valuable stone as that?" asked one of his friends who knew his circumstances.

"I will put you onto the snap," said the jeweler. "That stone has been growing for a year and I think it has got its growth."

"What do you mean by a diamond growing?" asked the friend.

"I will tell you. You remember the little spark I had in my scarfpin last Christmas. Well, this is what it has grown to in less than a year. That little stone cost me a dollar and the pin cost me $2 80. I sold the pin for $8 and bought an eight carat stone a little off shape for a trifle over $5. I bought a stud setting. You know you can get these things quite low now. They are made up by the thousands by firms which do not make finished goods. Well, I put the stone in the setting on a spiral and sold it the same week for $18. Then I went to the office and bought the best stone I could get for $15 and mounted that in the same manner. I wore it a month and then sold it for $30 to a bartender, and I put $25 into another stone. It was a little beauty and I traded it for another one of about the same size and got $5 to boot. That put the stone clear to $60 and I put it into a setting which cost me $3, and sold it a few days later for $85. I got another stone for $[illegible] and had it two months before I made a turn with it then I cleared $[illegible] money into a beautiful stone which brought me up to $[illegible] when I sold it in a handsome stud setting.

"Then I got a chance to get a ring for $75, and I made it to order out of a stone which cost me $12 50. I got the whole $75 into another stone which I carried around for a while and had almost made up my mind to keep but a fellow offered me $300 for it on the Elizabeth track this fall, and I sold it to him. I was in a crown setting which cost me $6 25. For the hundred I got a dandy stone, and I was sure I could keep it one, but I have had four better ones since and have got up to $180. I can go much higher than that. There are few men among my acquaintance who can afford to tempt me with a profitable offer for it. I would sell it to-night for $300, because I know it at I have got a bargain. I am a pretty good judge of diamonds and when I put that stone into a nice ring I will make it look like $250 worth; and I don't think that anybody can persuade me to sell it for anything less. In all the changes I don't think that I have put in more than $16 or $18 of my pocket money. The rest has all been profit on the stones and setting."

Exclusion of Salt Meat from France Discussed.

A Famous French Scientist Expresses his Disapproval.

Reid's Masterpiece of Diplomacy on the Subject.

PARIS, December 16.—Mr Henry La Luberne, the well known Parisian journalist, writes me as follows "The author of the following letter—Dr. Prosper de Pietra Santa—is one of the most authorized of living writers in France on questions of sanitary science. He is at the head of an institution which has the hygienic condition of the public for its field of investigation and of work, and his papers have the approval of the French Academy of Medicine Dr Prosper de Pietra Santa is linked by ties or blood to the Bonapartes Madame Mere as the mother of Napoleon was called—was a Pietra Santa The Princess Mathilde is a Pietra Santa The doctor, therefore, stands in the relation of a first cousin to Napoleon III. He was a court chamberlain at the Palace of the Tuileries in the halcyon days of the Empire. Although proud of his pedigree and of his family arms, (on which, by the way, figured the so called imperial eagle long before the advent of Napoleon) the doctor bases his claims to the respect of men on something more substantial than his name and escutcheon In personal appearance Dr. de Pietra Santa is a quiet, unassuming, white-headed gentleman of fifty, who lives retired with his wife and daughter on the second floor of a modest house in the Avenue de Wagram He started in May, 1877, the French Hygienic society, of which he is still the general secretary, and Don Pedro the honorary president. It included upwards of a thousand members, among whom figure Pasteur, Dr. Brouardel, Dr Charcot, M Alphand, M. Bouquet de La Grye, etc, and most of the renowned scientific doctors and savants of our time. The United States is largely represented by such familiar names as those of Mr Howard Young of Hartford, Conn, Dr Robert Fletcher of the Index Medicus, Washington, Dr Kellogg of New York Dr. George Rohe of Baltimore, Dr Sajous of Philadelphia, etc Its programme is a vast one The elucidation of the subtleties of exists the object of the society, and its sphere of usefulness may be said to spread over the whole ground of French daily life. The rooms where it meets to transact business in the Rue du Dragon include a library and a laboratory, and a monthly organ of its proceedings is published by the society. A letter from this gentleman on the action recently taken by the government of his country in respect to our salted meats cannot but prove of considerable interest." THEODORE STANTON.

The whole of the French press is quite sharply excited over the strained relations that exist between the cabinets of Paris and Washington respecting the entire question of customs duties Nor is this to be wondered at. The prospect of a policy of retaliation on the part of the United States against France, in return for the prohibition by the latter of American pork, is a matter of weighty concern, and one well calculated to stay the ardor of the most sanguine among French protectionists. America at present holds high hand over the heads of all nations. Strong, rich, and, consequently, independent, she can look boldly across the Atlantic, and, if maliciously inclined, laugh her rivals to scorn.

The time had come for a demonstration, and the query arose as to which of the European communities should step forward to bear the responsibility of provoking the proposed revolt When, in 1881, France proscribed American salted meats by a mere ministerial decree, issued without the legal sanction of the chambers, she deliberately threw down the glove and challenged the United States to fiscal combat

The other day one of our leading Paris organs, the Temps, devoted a long article to the McKinley tariff bill, and wound up by asking that a commercial treaty be negotiated between France and the United States The Paris journal then went on to say "Everybody who has followed the history of the customs relations between the two countries knows the importance attached to the decree prohibiting the introduction into France of American salt meats This act lost us the good will of the United States without our gaining anything in return May we not find here a ground on which to arrange the compromise desired by both parties?"

Exactly. The decree against American pork has caused great ill feeling in the United States, and especially in the west. Notwithstanding the fact that we still maintain the unnecessary prohibition, the house of representatives recently met France half way in placing art on the free list Although the American senate to the surprise of everybody restored the tax, the excellent action of the house on that occasion should be taken as indicative of its good intentions. But, however this may be, the suggestion offered by our Paris contempory should be acted upon without delay if France wishes to improve her commercial relations with the United States, she must first rescind this unfair decree against American pork products, after which, no doubt, important concessions might be obtained by treaty from the latter country

Everyone in France, as in the other countries that followed her example, knew very well, when the decree was passed that American pork was not more subject to trichinosis than that of Europe and that an isolated case like that which occurred at Crespven-Valois in 1878—a case sufficiently obscure, by the way, and brought about by a local hog—the like of which might have been found in Servia Germany, Russia or England, did not justify a wholesale exclusion and a sweeping condemnation of American pork as noxious and unwholesome.

It is not sought to establish that trichinosis is wholly a myth My attention was first drawn to Owen's trichina spiralis as far back as 1866, and already at that early date I published a treatise on the subject In August of the year following a severe outbreak of the disease occurred at Hamburg In one house alone nine persons were smitten down by the scourge The authorities there unpossessed a number of living hogs as well as a quantity of pork, and found that some of the animals and a portion of the meat bore traces of the dangerous parasite. Since then numerous cases have been signalized in Saxony and Germany Westphalia, Hanover, and the circle of Erfurth In 1883, my eminent colleague, Dr Brouardel, was sent by the French government on a mission to study an outbreak of the plague at Eversleben, near Halberstadt On his return, the learned professor sent a report to the Academy of medicine, the substance of which may be summed up by saying that the outbreak was purely local, as is always the case, and that no fear of its reaching French soil should be entertained On a previous occasion, when a similar outbreak took place at Neugersdorf, in 1870, the French government sent Dr Delpech to investigate the matter on the spot, and the doctor reported that strict sanitary supervision at the frontier was alone required That trichinosis has a bona fide existence can not be doubted The agricultural department at Washington never denied that trichinæ were to be found in pork products, as well in America as elsewhere, but the proportion discovered by microgrophers in the United States never exceeded from 1 66 to 2 5, a very small proportion indeed The examinations made in Germany by official inspectors fully confirm these data, as even there, were, if anything, the helminth is more often met with the proportion according to M Gulenberg, is, on an average as about 2 5 per cent

If there is this fact to be considered, that the culinary habits of the Germans differ widely from those of the French in matters of pork meat. Outbreaks of trichinosis are almost invariably due to the German custom of eating ham, and often fresh pork, in a half raw state Even in America, when an outbreak of this kind occurs the disease may safely be fought home to the Germans, who, by the seas, still follow the practice of eating crude ham as in their native land It has been scientifically demonstrated experimentally proved that trichinæ when exposed to pork means are duly destroyed by the process of cooking, boiling at a minimum of 80 degrees being found sufficient, when all danger arising from that source to the consumer entirely disappears. Meats of this kind are always well cooked in France, hence the immunity of French men from the disease

If France to day still excludes American pork, the onus of guilt belongs to Mr Paul Bert, who when the chamber of deputies brought the question to a solution, did all he could to thwart Harrisson in his praiseworthy efforts at rescinding the prohibitive decree By parading before the house the spectre of trichinophobia the former gained his point M Paul Bert, who was a learned physiologist, but poor statesman, went the length to affirm that the economic question was sheer nonsense as said he, "by spending a few more sous the French workman could readily find a substitute in ordinary meat" "Protect us," he exclaimed, "against home infection, so we be not reduced like Germany to a chronic state of epidemic poisoning" Then assuming his most solemn tone of address, which but ill disguised his secret eagerness to overthrow the ministry, Paul Bert added. "I adjure the house neither to engage its own responsibility nor that of the government, or to act in such a way as may cause it to see with regret the disease appear in some locality, when it has in fact full power to prevent such a catastrophe"

My only commentary on this tirade is to reproduce the statements of the world renowned scientists, Virchow, Hertenig and Kohler as set forth by them in official documents published by the imperial board of health at Berlin "The dangers" say these authorities, "are illusory no outbreak of trichinosis arising from the consumption of American pork has ever taken place in Germany

As regards France, I rebutted the charge unsustained by facts before the Academy of Medicine, and concluded as follows "After all that has been said or done, in the name of scientific facts, in the name of political economy, in the name of free trade, we entertain the the hope and the conviction that, while affording every desirable guarantee to public health, the wise principles which have already triumphed on two several occasions in our midst, may yet be adopted by the chamber of deputies and the councils of the government, and the Academy of Medicine will be able able to inscribe in its annals still another service rendered to the causes of public health which is also that of humanity and civilization"

In a report addressed in 1886 to the French police department M Villain, chief of the veterinary service of the department of the Seine, says "Since 1881 a special service of inspection is at work at Batignolles railway station, where every week upwards of 5,000 samples of pork meats are examined microscopically" He adds that, from his long experience, he is enabled to affirm that the danger of infection or disease arising from the consumption of pork is less to be dreaded in France than in any other country, on account of the thorough manner in which that class of meat is cooked there And in this connection he instances a curious fact The Paris meat inspectors at this depot told him that in their presence several pork butchers, or their assistants, in order to prove the innocuousness of products in which trichinæ had been microscopically discovered, eat some of the salted meats without any subsequent ill effects resulting to the man So also in the case of rats, dogs and cats, that were fed by the department on similar meats for a whole fortnight, the results were in every way negative.

Infection of this kind is no more to be apprehended from eating pork in France than in England and Belgium, where the American article is largely consumed. In England, the house of commons, in the name of the queen's government, wisely declared that the exclusion of salted meats from America would be most prejudicial to the poorer classes of the community. Mr. Mundella said: "We have done quite rightly in refusing to follow the course just taken by the French government" The Belgian chamber of deputies showed equal wisdom and decision; after consulting their medical academy and board of health, the members rejected both preventive and prohibitory measures, no case of trichinosis from American products having been noted in that country.

If my own personal views on the subject have in turn triumphed and failed, the incidents of the struggle have in no wise shaken my firm, inflexible convictions, which have been guided throughout by free trade principles As I said before, the fiscal conditions thus arbitrarily erected on the French frontier with the object of excluding cheap and wholesome American pork viands caused, from the outset, not only unbounded surprise in the scientific world, but a great outcry among all classes of the population Energetic disclaimers appeared in all the French newspapers The prohibitions decreed against the products of American stock yards and packing houses have no just cause, they have not only deprived the poorer classes in France, as well as the army and the navy, of good and low priced food, but stirred up a resentful feeling between two countries which, as Whitelaw Reid so aptly remarks, had been historically friendly for a century The repeal of this obnoxious measure would be an act of naked justice only too long deferred. The French government is now confronted with the fact that it must perforce abrogate the decree of exclusion, even should it think itself bound to pass a protective tariff act. Should such a desirable consummation be reached, America would win, as she rightly deserves to do, a decided victory for her pork products in the eyes of all Europe, where they are under more or less suspicion among the more ignorant classes, because of the action of France in excluding them. Nor is it certain, in the event of the decree being cancelled, that the French chamber of deputies would consent to levy a protective tariff upon pork. It would be an unwise proceeding even from a protectionist standpoint, and there are many in France who would protest against it One of the reasons for the decree of exclusion was to avoid the unpopularity which the government would have scored if the same result had been openly sought by tariff legislation Another reason was that a policy of strict protection should be masked by a convenient pretext. The idea was to cause a rise in the price of French pork at the cost of the consumer. It was an intrigue among the agricultural deputies or their abettors This wretched policy has now lasted for nine years, greatly to the detriment of the army, the mercantile marine, general commerce, and the public good. It is high time that such a state of things should cease.

The Americans are only two well justified in their threatened policy of retaliation They only return blow for blow and insult for insult when they say that our Bordeaux wines are all doctored and adulterated—which, of course, is a greater exaggeration on their part than for us to affirm that their pork products are unwholesome. Mr. Whitelaw Reid's letter to our minister of foreign affairs is, from top to bottom, a rare document in diplomacy. It is a masterly presentation of the American side of the controversy, full of finesse and practical good sense, and the work of no ordinary writer. The facts and figures brought to bear in his courteous and carefully weighed challenge to M. Ribot constitute in reality a page of contemporaneous history calculated to baffle the mind of future generations, for I should like to know by what process of reasoning, or yet undiscovered logic our deep political thinkers and would be protectionists are likely to refute the incontrovertible arguments is contains He puts the whole affair in a nutshell If France continued its policy of excluding American pork, the United States will retaliate by boycotting our wines And even then, the advantage remains on the American side So long as the United States has beer and whisky, its citizens can get along without our wine more easily than we can get along without their pork The reason is obvious and a clincher We do not raise enough hog meat to supply our demands, nor is there any reasonable belief that we ever shall

The United States is the only country that could assume such an attitude; her resources are so vast and so varied that she is as independent of the rest of the world as it is possible for a nation to be American pork is kept out of France by an administrative act, not by a tariff. If American pork were shut out from France by a tariff, the United States would have nothing whatever to say. But such is not the case Why should we encourage the import of German and Austrian pork, or pork from any country in the world except America? Such action on our part constitutes an odious edict of unjust and unfriendly discrimination, and the president of the United States is morally bound, as he is legislatively empowered, to treat us as we treat him, who is the dignified representative of a great people.

ANNOUNCEMENT

There is no more useful reference book than an atlas of the world. The most useful one now published for an American is the Rand, McNally Standard Atlas of the World. The information it contains regarding this country is more accurate and fuller than that published in the more expensive atlases costing from ten to twenty-five dollars. THE LONDON FIRE

The big fire in London occurred in that part of the city lying near the Thames east of Blackfriars bridge. The narrow streets, Thames and Queen [illegible] running westward ugh a large warehouse. The fire origin[illegible] from one street to extending [illegible]. At latest accounts the fire [illegible] under control after having burned [illegible] blocks of buildings and destroyed property whose value is variously estimated from one and a half to ten million dollars. The notable buildings destroyed are the Welsh church of St Bennet, and the church of old St Paul's. The latter name will recall to mind the great cathedral which was built by Sir Christopher Wren, the famous architect who built London after the great fire of 1666 had destroyed five sixths of the city. That conflagration burned past the scene of yesterday's fire, beginning near the Tower of London, at a place now commemorated by the monument and extending almost to the west end of Fleet street, a distance of more than a mile. The name of the church burned yesterday would seem to suggest that it may have been one of the buildings spared by the fire of two centuries. In this connection it may be [illegible] to note that the Chicago fire burned over 2,100 [illegible] destroyed $200 [illegible] ty. The [illegible] from [illegible]

"I don't think you have what I want."

"We have 'most everything," said the waiter.

"Yes," responded the girl, "but I came in here on purpose for one thing, and I don't see it on the menu."

"What is it, miss?" asked the waiter.

"Frankfurter sausages and sauerkraut," replied the maiden.

One of the men at the neighboring table dropped his glass, and another coughed convulsively from having swallowed the wrong way. The young lady rose from her chair and inquired of the waiter if he knew any place close by where sausages and sauerkraut were obtainable. She was told to seek Sixth avenue.

"I will bet," said the waiter, "that that girl is of German descent." And he turned up his nose as far as it would go. He was French.—New York Letter.

"Well, where have you been for the last three months?" queried Sergt. Bendall yesterday, as Carl Dunder softly opened the door of the Woodbridge street station about a foot and squeezed through the aperture.

"Oh, I vhas keeping quiet. I like to speak to you a few words today."

"All right."

"Der odder day a man comes py my place und plays me a game of dominoes und says his name vhas Shon White. Dot makes no deefference to me if he vhas Sheorge Washington. He must pay me shust so quick or I knock him out."

"Of course."

"Vhell, he pays me und seems like a decent fellow, und pretty soon he says he has a check on der bank und likes me to go and say he vhas Shon White."

"And you went?"

"Vhell, I like to oblige."

"And you identified him?"

"Vhell, vhen I knows he vhas Shon White how could I help it? Dot vhas a bogus check for feefteen dollar, und I haf to pay it. I doan' see how it vhas."

"Um! Anything more?"

"Somepody doan' play me dot vhay again. My eye teeth vhas cut awfully queek. In two days a fellow comes along mit a subscription paper. He says he likes me to put down a dollar for der poor. I ask him for his name, und he says he vhas Peter Davis, Sergeant, you should see me knock him cofer der middle of last Shuly."

"Yes, and you'll have to pay for it. He was at the police court this morning to get a warrant for you."

"A warrant for me! But he vhas a shwindler!"

"Oh, no, he wasn't; he was all right."

"Vhell, I might ask vhell shump into der rifer. How vhas I to tell aboudt dings? Nothings vhas two times alike."

"Anything else?"

"Vhell, you see, a man comes in my place mit a package und says vhas I Carl Dunder. I vhas. Here vhas some express from Chicago, und he haf to collect $2. Vhas dot all right, sergeant?"

"Looks that way."

"Of course she does, but after he goes avhay und I open dot package I find some brickbats in it. He vhas an awful schwindler."

"But you ought to have spotted him."

"Oh, yes! Spots vhas all right! In two days how vhas she? In shust two days vhas you believe?"

"Well?"

"Vhell, some ouder man's come in mit a package und says vhas my name Carl Dunder. Yes. He haf some package for me from Noo York und I haf to pay $1. Sergeant, I shumps on dot man und knocks him so cold dot his own uncle down know him und believes he vhas a young man from Troy."

"Then you spotted him?"

"Spots! Spots! Yes. I see some spots! He belongs by de regular express company, and he vhas going to sue us for [illegible] dollars! Can you see how [illegible] vhas time it vhas all wrong [illegible], and I now [illegible] vhas all right. No [illegible]."

Does It Pay to Advertise?

IT DOES,

If you [illegible] Enquirer, though about [illegible] older than Mr McLean, is still [illegible] Cincinnati.

Washington McLean was born in Cincinnati in 1816, and it is scarcely a figure of speech to add that he was born a Democrat. He certainly adhered to the Democratic party with unyielding tenacity through all its vicissitudes. He obtained but a common school education, and at an early age was apprenticed to a machinist. He soon acquired some property and became proprietor of a boiler factory. He next secured large interests in a line of steamboats and finally joined Mr. Farran in buying the Cincinnati Enquirer. Mr McLean soon took chief control of the policy of the paper and had already made it a power when the civil war came and plunged him into embarrassments which, however, had their humorous features.

In his peculiar way Mr McLean often remarked that he "had a major general for a proofreader." Cincinnati was practically under military rule and The Enquirer under strict surveillance during the period when Gen Burnside commanded that department in his somewhat peculiar way, and that general often read the proof slips before the paper went to press. Mr McLean was, however, a warm friend of both Secretary Stanton and Gen Grant, but he never yielded his convictions and made it a point to befriend those who, as he phrased it, "had suffered in the cause with him." He was styled the Warwick of the Ohio Democracy, and was always a power, though he never held office.

His wife survives him, as do their three children—Mrs Hazen, widow of the well known general, Mr Hugh T. McLean, and John R. McLean. Deceased was attached to the Old Scotch or United Presbyterian church. His remains rest in Spring Grove cemetery, Cincinnati.

Queer Facts About Palms.

A palm of Pedur, India, 11 feet high changes its position morning and evening a handkerchief tied to its leaves so as to touch the ground at 4 a. m. having been six inches from the ground at 5:30 a. m., 18 inches at 8 p. m., and 9 feet at 3 a. m. A leaf stalk of the travelers' tree of Madagascar contains, even in the driest season, a quart of water. Schelwisch, the Bavarian naturalist, found in the heart of Africa an iron tree, from which the leaves could only be removed by filing. Another African tree yields butter. An engineer who has been surveying in Central America reports a tree which shines with a brilliant light at night, a tree which gives milk and a tree which bears dough for bread.

Two Bright Young Women.

Miss McChesney, a New York artist, is a tall, slender young woman with a bright face crowned by a mass of gorgeous red gold hair.

Miss Throop, another New York artist, has painted some astonishingly good work which branch of art is her favorite. She has had commissions from a number of prominent New York people. She paints with great fidelity and truth, paying marked attention to values and atmospheric effects.

Welcomed to the United States.

Among recent distinguished visitors to America is Mr Robert Niven, M. A. (Oxford), who besides being known as a barrister, lecturer and reviewer in England has a reputation as a political speaker. He was a Liberal Unionist candidate at the last general parliamentary election. His experience and personal knowledge of English parliament arians is extensive, and he is widely versed on all topics of the times. Consequently he is receiving a warm welcome from American literary leaders and statesmen, who find his views which he expresses publicly or privately entertaining and of value.

Colorado's Senators Win Applause from the Democrats

Wolcott Speaks in Opposition to the Election Bill

Teller Argues Against the Proposed Cloture Rule

Fifty first Congress

SENATE

WASHINGTON December 30 The senate met at 10 o clock this morning with a fairly full attendance of senators in attendance

Attention was called to the fact of the absence of a quorum by some of the democratic senators who were present Messrs Gorman and Faulkner The roll call showed the presence of only seventeen senators and the sergeant at arms was directed to request the attendance of absentees

It was 11 o clock before a quorum (44) was secured and the journal of yesterday was read

The vice president laid before the senate the credentials of Fredericks I Dubois as senator from the state of Idaho for the term beginning March 4 1891 They were referred to the committee on privileges and elections

Reagan gave notice of two amendments to Aldrich s cloture resolution

Then the morning hour having expired the senate resumed consideration of the elections bill and Hoar continued his speech commenced yesterday in its advocacy

In conclusion Hoar addressed himself directly to the southern senators and said You have tried everything else now try justice You have exhausted every policy and failed This terrible question will not down Your people have lived too long under the evil counsellors who led them into rebellion into war into poverty into crime Let them listen now to the counsels of the great orator of antiquity Justice is itself the great standing policy of civil society and any eminent departure from it under any circumstances lies under the suspicion of being no policy at all

Wolcott made an animated speech against the bill attracting the closest attention from its first sentence to its last It was he said a source of great regret to him to be called upon to differ with any considerable number of his party and to decline to take the path which the older leaders pointed out It was proper that the reasons which impelled that difference be fairly stated The time for the bill was not opportune Nearly one third of the session was through and day light was not visible There were before the senate measures of vast importance that would fail for another year at least unless they were now acted upon Among the measures awaiting action Wolcott mentioned the silver bill the apportionment bill, the pure food bill the copyright bill the civil land court bill. We stand, he said in the shadow of a great financial disaster The people turn to congress for relief They want the assurance either that there will be no legislation on the financial subject or that it will receive an adequate medium of circulation for the transaction of their business But it was not only he said because these measures were clamoring for recognition that he felt compelled to oppose the passage of the elections bill If the session was to last indefinitely and if none of the vital measures were pending he would still vote against it It was a travesty on duty that the senate should sit day after day discussing changes in an election law that had stood without amendment for 20 years In his opinion the election bill should not become a law because it involved federal interference and espionage at other than national elections, and such interference was contrary to the spirit of American institutions and an obstruction to the righteous judgment of the American people It was to his mind far better that the local and state elections in the city of New York with its thousands of ignorant criminal voters should be attended by fraud and dishonesty than that they should be kept pure by federal interference They had tried in Colorado the remedy of federal interference under direction of a democrat district attorney and a democrat marshal The law had been administered by a judge who was so fair that he was opposed to both parties and yet it had been given up and now the people of Colorado manage their own elections fairly and incorruptibly The people of the United States Wolcott said wanted no civil strife and it would be impossible to enforce such a law against the united opposition of the white population in the southern states The attempt would bring back the old days of terrorizing and the weaker race would be the sufferer This was many times more important and vital to the welfare of the nation than that the colored citizens of the south should cast their ballots Referring to the question put by Eustis some weeks ago to Dolph as to what the people of Oregon would do under similar circumstances if Chinese voters were in a majority in that state, Wolcott said that Dolph s answer seemed evasive He (Wolcott) could not speak for Oregon but he gave it as his solemn opinion that in Colorado whose mountains inspired only freedom and love of justice and where the republican party had as large a majority in proportion to its population as Kansas or Nebraska had in their florid years [laughter among democrats] if such a condition of affairs existed and if the Chinese vote was opposed to the united and intelligent white voters the white voters in some way and by some method would govern [Democratic applause] He was not informed that in any southern state there was any inclination to legislate against the colored men except that on the question of suffrage there was serious friction between the races That would surely cease when (if congress did not seek to foment the trouble) the white voters of the south would be hardly as unanimous as they were now The signs of the times pointed unmistakably to serious differences among them and when those differences became settled the colored voter would be in demand He could afford to wait so long as he was protected in life and property and so could the republican party wait If the republicans had every southern member of the next house of representatives they would be still short of a majority Two years from now when the benefits of the tariff law would have been demonstrated they would not need the assistance of the southern republicans under situation which they also sought to have There was another and a weightier reason why in his opinion the bill should be defeated For a quarter of a century, but from poverty and despair the south had been put willing forth an effort to plant industry on the solid rock of material prosperity And in view of the marvelous growth and transformation now taking place in the southern states it would be, he believed unwise and unpatriotic for congress to interfere in the conduct of these affairs He had no hope of any political reorganization and did not [illegible] of the [illegible] not [illegible]

[illegible] Under change of law [illegible] officer labels [illegible] would see Hoar Lodge [illegible] they had come out and up into [illegible] between the influence [illegible] and he Wolcott was now willing to intrude on that [illegible] with his vote in favor of a [illegible] the strife and bitterness [illegible] was [illegible] got the freedom [illegible] applause [illegible]

The speech of Wolcott s speech the [illegible] was made [illegible] was taken up [illegible] Stewart [illegible]

In [illegible] Teller [illegible] made the point that the friends of the election [illegible] Now the [illegible] which [illegible] reverse the traditions of the senate [illegible] that body to overthrow the practice which [illegible] years In the section [illegible] with which he in part represented the [illegible] was kept before the senate for the purpose of [illegible] and [illegible] financial legislation He [illegible] say that this was [illegible] heard it so frequently that it had made an impression on his mind [illegible] senator from Massachusetts [illegible] not wish to stand in the way of [illegible] he should put the senate in a position to vote on the amendments [illegible] offered or allowed to be offered [illegible] which would cut off debate [illegible] this Whether he would vote [illegible] the bill or not depended upon the [illegible] of the bill when it came [illegible] he wanted an opportunity to vote for amendments He was out of sympathy with the purport of the bill At another time (if the rule would allow him) he expected to submit a new [illegible] the bill in extension He himself would amend the bill so that he would gladly vote for it but so far he had had no opportunity to offer an amendment and it now looked as if there would be no opportunity to do so He did not believe that the people of the United States were prepared for the proceeding and for one he was prepared to resist by all proper methods the adoption of the cloture resolution [illegible] the senate had an opportunity to vote upon amendments He understood the bill was to come up for action on Tuesday next There were more important bills pending before the senate than the election bill The country stood in the face of a great financial crisis on The great minds of the country [illegible] that we are on the verge of a financial panic The bankers of New York are saying 'Everything is lively Why? They dare not say otherwise If the people could awake to the real condition there would be danger of financial ruin to 10 000 men absolutely solvent to day He believed that it was the duty of the senate to meet this question squarely to the friends of the bill were in earnest they could pass it without a rule They could pass it as bills had been passed in the days of reconstruction as they had been passed before and during the war

Mitchell here suggested to the great satisfaction and amusement of democratic senators that it was in order for the senate to adjourn so that there might be a republican conference

Hawes said that the constitution required the majority to rule and an attempt on the part of the minority to say that there should not be a vote upon a question was nothing short of revolution I do not know when we shall come to a vote on this measure but I shall go for anything short of absolute despotism to get a vote upon it whenever the majority of the senate thinks itself ready to vote cloture or no cloture

Mr Teller This side is charged with the passage of the bill if it is to be passed The minority has the right to come and object to cigar and debate to come and amend and it would be a sorry time for the American people when the majority shall say that debate shall close whether the representatives of independent states are ready to close it or not Mr President I am in favor of the majority ruling I know that no government can be maintained when the majority does not rule but I know there is nothing more despotic nothing more arbitrary nothing that approaches nearer to monarchy than the tyrannical action of the majority A minority is absolutely indispensable to the preservation of liberty in any country If there was not a minority party in this country there would be little prospect of the maintenance of American liberty The minority has a right to resist by all proper means by debate by dilatory motions, so as to get an opportunity to be heard It has a right to be heard and when it has been heard when it has presented every objection that it can present then it is its duty to yield unless it is on some extraordinary occasion I have seen the entire republican side of the senate retire from the chamber with the exception of one or two men when there was a democratic majority because we were resisting what we believed to be an improper measure on their part That was the right of the minority then and so it will be the right of the minority now if the pending bill be of such a character as would justify its opponents in resorting to it I do not believe that it is and if I were an opponent of it I would be inclined to let it pass But I can conceive of measures as to which rather than see them pass I would retire from the chamber

After a short executive session the senate adjourned

HOUSE

After the chaplain had delivered a brief prayer (in which he invoked the divine protection over the land during the coming year) and after the journal of the last day s session had been read and approved the house adjourned until Friday

The Roof Fell In

NEW YORK December 30 — The big brewery of Herman Koehler occupying the whole block at First avenue between Twenty ninth and Thirtieth streets was in course of construction and crowded with workmen when suddenly and without any warning the roof fell in The police think that perhaps thirty persons were injured Seven have already been taken out of the ruins and sent to the hospital and the work still continues It is not known that any one was killed

LATER — All the workmen who were in the building when the accident occurred are accounted for Only seven were injured James Burke probably fatally injured [illegible] New York [illegible]

Dougherty [illegible] injured [illegible] fractured [illegible] was taken to the Roosevelt hospital [illegible] Weber suffered from a fracture of the [illegible] and [illegible] Hayes from Massachusetts was [illegible] injured The rest were [illegible] S Brieseger badly scraped about the face and hands John Duffy Ackerman [illegible] Henry [illegible] East [illegible]

A Deputy Clerk in Trouble

DENVER December 30 — A Times special says Rumors have been flying around the city for some time that there was something wrong in the county clerk s office but not until today could the particulars be learned It is said that Mike Besbeaupre jr deputy has been using his position freely and that his business transactions have been unofficial warrants issued by Mr Sande for clerk and he always being the clerk and cashing them How much he has issued is not at this writing known but it is thought to be considerable Officials are now checking up his work He is also charged with having forged the names of several business men to checks for small amounts all of which he lost at gambling He is a son of M Besbeaupre of the Advertiser of this city and has been in trouble before similar to this but the affair was hushed up by his father making good the amount His whereabouts are at present unknown

They Changed their Plans

CHICAGO December 30 — The four men who were connected with the robbery of the Merchants Exchange bank at South Chicago Saturday are still locked up at the Hyde Park station John Forbett Harry Featherstone and Frank Bonfet the men who actually committed the robbery have been identified as the men who in an equally bold manner entered the Allerton Packing house at the stock yards on December 2 and robbed Cashier Oiver of $3200

It now transpires that the police had a spy in communication with the robbers and were kept fully informed of their plans The original arrangement was to rob the bank to morrow but the gang became suspicious of the police stool pigeon and hurried matters

New Mexico s Legislature

SANTA FE N M December 30 — Governor Prince s message was laid before the legislature in joint session today In the council several measures pertaining to the public school system to high license and to prevent pools and trusts

In the house Mr J H Walker democrat resigned as member of the committee on privileges and elections making it evident that there has been a hitch in the original programme of the democrats to unseat two sitting members from Santa Fe and one from Taos county all republicans

Minnesota Farmers

ST PAUL December 30 — Between 800 and 1 000 delegates are in attendance on the state Farmers Alliance convention to day The convention was called to order about 11 o clock but the committee on credentials is not yet prepared to make its report and no business has been transacted The chief interest centers in the election for president Ignatius Donnelly is believed to have the best chances for the office The anti Donnellites are combining on Hon Kittel Halvers the congressman elect from the Fifth district as their candidate

Sawtelle Removed

DOVER N H December 30 — Isaac B Sawtelle convicted of the murder of his brother Hiram and sentenced to be hanged Jan 5 1891 left here this morning under guard for the state prison at Concord where he is to remain until the execution of his sentence He bade farewell to all the jail attaches thanking them for their kindness to him and as the train left the depot threw kisses to some ladies on the platform and shouted Good bye good bye He is apparently in the best of spirits has no fear of the future and does not believe that he will ever be hanged

Jackson and Corbett Matched

SAN FRANCISCO December 30 — The directors of the California Athletic club at a meeting last night decided to match Jim Corbett and Peter Jackson for a contest to a finish to take place before the club next May The purse is to be for $10 000 $8 500 of which will go to the winner

Both pugilists are now in the city and have signified their willingness to accept the terms

Reed Sentenced

TROY N Y December 30 — John J Reed who was indicted with Caine and Buell for misplacing a switch on the Central railroad near Greenbush during the big strike was sentenced this morning in the court of sessions by Judge Griffith to seven years imprisonment

Modern Art Criticism

New York Star

What beautiful statuary said a woman to her three companions while walking through the Metropolitan Museum of Art yesterday afternoon

Yes replied one "this must be Iza of the Clemenceau Case and she pointed to a cast of Venus de Medici

The committee in charge are awfully enterprising" she continued I suppose they got her figure in here about as quick as she was formulated in Tolstoi s brain

There were some twelve or thirteen people who heard the remark and it was only pity that kept them from bursting with laughter I looked critically at the woman who had unconsciously betrayed her lack of artistic knowledge She was tastefully and elegantly dressed with a refined handsome and striking face It hardly seemed possible that such a well appearing woman could be so ignorant

The following team will represent Colorado Springs in their return match with Denver on New Year s Day Center Hagerman guards Malloch and Kerr tackles, Eastman and Harris ends Carnduff and Berry, quarter back R. Barnes, half backs King and Gleason full back M Barnes The game will take place at the new athletic park at 2 30 p m and will be the most interesting ever witnessed in this city

A class in bookkeeping will be organized on Thursday night at 7 30 at the Y M C A rooms A large attendance has already been secured

James in Richelieu

A great deal of interest is taken in the opening engagement of tragedian Louis James and his super company who will be here for two nights Friday evening [illegible] Macbeth [illegible] Saturday At exercises says

It seems a pity necessary to refer to Richard James in the terms of fulsome praise over which critics have grown weary in their efforts to properly appreciate and honor the art of this truly great man but when a performance so perfect in every respect as that of Mr James is witnessed with the presence and rare voice scholarly and highly trained in stage art he stands at the head and front of the actors of heroic character to day There is no man on the stage to day but he that can in his entirety surpass Mr James rendition of the cardinal statesman and that is Mr James himself The following was the cast
